Creating a Classic Photo Manipulation in Photoshop is Easy In the below tutorial, I'll take you through the process of creating a classic image manipulation in Photoshop, by way of using an unusual background and drawing within an image file. Be sure to check out the previous Photoshop tutorial, Super Easy Image Manipulation In Photoshop To Create A Dreamy Beauty! Step 1 - Creating a New Photoshop Document Step 2 - Selecting the Background of the Image Select the Background and create a new layer. You can use the most basic of images. For this tutorial, I used a photo I took from the beach. As you can see, the background is a boring photograph. Tip: You can always change the color and/or add a stylistic filter to your background image to give it a personal touch. Be sure to use a different color as your background so that you can see the results of your photoshop manipulation better. Step 3 - Drawing within the Image Creating the image involves using a few drawing tools, including the Pen tool, the Brush tool, a path, and a raster brush. I'll be using the Pen tool (iconized) to create the image and the Brush tool (pencil icon) to paint over the Pen tool. The Brush Tool This tool enables you to draw a smooth, dotted, and/or other shaped line that acts like a brush. To access brush tools, simply click on the Brush tool in the toolbox or press H on your keyboard. Iconized Pen Tool You can change the size of the Brush tool by pressing S on your keyboard. This will open the Brush settings box. You can also change the color of the pen by holding down the 'Shift' key when clicking. When drawing with the Pen tool, you can click the square shape that appears at the end to adjust the width of the line you create. Click and drag with the Pen tool to resize the square end. The Pen tool can also be used to create a shape by holding down the 'ctrl' key and clicking/dragging with the pen until you form a shape. Then, use the path tool and stroke settings to finish the path. Step 4 - Creating the Image Shape Now, I will draw a circle with the Pen

In order to fully use Photoshop, you will need to have Adobe Photoshop installed on your computer. Photoshop Elements does not use the same interface or user interface that Photoshop uses. It has a different look and feel. It makes it easier to switch between the two programs by making it so that you can open the same files from one program to the next. That's right. You can use Photoshop Elements to edit images, create new images, and so much more. Q: How can I tell whether the browser calling my web application is IE7, IE8, IE9? I'm creating a simple ASP.NET MVC application that will deploy on Windows Server 2008, IIS 6.0. I'd like to detect the IE version of the client (the website) requesting the application. I've been reading about the Fiddler2 addon to IE. What I was hoping for was something similar, but in C#, which would avoid the need for Fiddler. I'd like this code to work even if the app is deployed to an internal web server, so the Fiddler2 add-on wouldn't work for me. I'm also looking for something that would work against HTTP Live Streaming, which is being used to build the app. The simplest solution would be if I could determine the browser version by parsing the User-Agent value. Is there a way to do this? I'd prefer a method that doesn't use Reflection. Or even Expression Trees! There are plenty of third party versions of IE, so specifying a version isn't really a solution. Thanks in advance. A: If the website works on IE 8 and you deploy the website to your servers, it will work. IE8 has access to the server's memory as it has full trust, not just for the site. If it does work on IE 9, it should work on IE 7 and 8 as well. Fiddler2 is not something I would recommend unless you know how to use it. It is a rather difficult addon, although useful. If you have the money, it is worth it. If you don't have the money, don't use it. There are a few ways to do this: The first is by looking at the UserAgent string. Usually it will look something like this: Mozilla/5.0 (Windows; U; Windows NT 6.1; en-US; rv:1.9.1.3) Gecko/20101203 Firefox/3.6.3 If you have 10 or more users that are IE 7-9, you can compare the User Agent Strings to see which browser the user is using. One of the more advanced solutions is to use the SPDY protocol. You
